IPICD HAS YOUR BEST INTERESTS IN MIND

You have seen and heard the news.

Law enforcement officers (LEO) being criminally charged by prosecutors following an emotionally-charged and high-profile arrest-related death. Then, following an emotional, lengthy, and expensive trial, several LEOs are criminally convicted and sent to prison. Many times, critical information was not gathered because investigators were unsure about what to ask, what information and evidence was important to obtain; Medical Examiner opinions failed to follow published science and negatively impacted the case outcome; and not knowing the importance of forensically analyzing body-worn and other camera video can have a devastating impact on confirming or denying officer statements about what happened.

The IPICD's 12th annual conference will help you prepare for these situations. Learn from subject-matter experts what you need to do now to prepare for these increasingly frequent, emotionally-charged, and career-ending situations. Identify the scientific, legal, medical, and other information you will need to obtain from or to challenge medical examiners, investigators, and others to help you prepare for trial and put on a career-saving defense. Learn what you can do to help insulate yourself from liability before and after such events.

This is not another use-of-force legal update seminar. The IPICD conference focuses on what you need to know before and after force is used. This is the most important conference you can attend for yourself, for your family, for your community, for your career, and for your future. You will learn what you need to know to help save your or another officer's career, and to keep you or another officer from a possible prison sentence.
